Although on and off loading of the Strong Cajun was delayed by two days when stevedores throughout the Azores archipelago went on strike Monday.

Strike ends after two days, Strong Cajun on track

SSgt. Rosaire Bushey
Editor

The National Federation of Port workers began an Azores-wide strike of stevedore operations at all ports in the archipelago at midnight Sunday. By Wednesday morning the striking workers were back to work although negotiations were still ongoing. The Strong Cajun ship which services the base was in port Monday several days ahead of schedule so bases stocks will not be affected.

"Because of good weather the Strong Cajun was able to make Praia port Monday instead of Thursday when it was originally scheduled," said Col. Rod Gibson, 65th Air Base Wing Commander. "Even with the strike, we're still off-loading more than a day ahead of our normal timeframe."

Gibson said that had the strike gone on for an extended period of time, the base had plans in place to make sure there were no major disruptions of goods and services provided on base.

"The people who probably would have noticed the impact the most are those who have vehicles and household goods on this Strong Cajun," Gibson said. "They could have potentially been waiting for the duration of the strike."

The wing commander also said that all agencies had double-checked their supplies and both the commissary and exchange were well stocked.

The strike was organized by the national labor union of stevedores Azores-wide and was not aimed at Americans or their interests.

Security forces name change offers flexibility

SSgt. Rosaire Bushey
Editor

As of Tuesday, the 65th Security Police Squadron was no more. Now the protectors of the base and of Air Force assets are known as the 65th Security Forces Squadron. The change, however, is more than cosmetic as it will affect the unit's flexibility in dealing with situations.

"For most people the change will be transparent," said Capt. Patrick Vetter, 65th SFS Commander. "The real changes will be internal where Air Force specialty codes and training will be involved."

Under the old system SPs were broken down into three different AFSCs - security, law enforcement and combat arms training and maintenance specialists. Under the new system all specialties will merge together.

"What will happen now is that when people achieve their 5-skill levels, they'll get training in one of the other areas such as combat arms or canine handling," Vetter said. "What it does for us as a unit is gives us a broader base of similar training. It also gives us more flexibility and options to provide different missions."

Vetter said the change-over should take about two years and the new AFSC will come on line Nov. 1. Beginning next year testing within the career field will be PFE only until the changes and training are implemented.

"The name change won't change what we do," said TSgt. Curtis Easley, superintendent of SF administration. "What it will do is provide us all additional training to augment what we already know. The change is a good thing"

People shouldn't stop obeying the law, however.

"Although we aren't law enforcement or security police specialists by name, we'll still continue to provide those services for the base populace," Vetter said.

This ol' Base

Where have all the name signs gone?

MSgt. Daniel Rohrbach
65th Civil Engineer Squadron

As a general rule, military family housing (MFH) units in the continental United States have name signs identifying the occupant's name and rank. However, for reasons of security, overseas installations generally do not.

Although we are fortunate to be stationed at this secure location, we are currently working an initiative that will gradually remove all of the "official" name signs on MFH units. Our motivation is to free up funds and manpower expended to fabricate and install new name signs every time families rotate into or out of housing, or when an individual gets promoted.

During this transition, some members will have signs identifying their facility and some will not. In no way does this imply that one member is more or less important than another, for our eventual goal is to remove all of these signs from the facilities.

The plan of the 65th Civil Engineer Squadron is this: As you may already know, Upper "T" housing is in the process of receiving an exterior face-lift. Name signs will not be put back on the housing units under this renovation.

"The application of adhesives or penetrations in the new siding system must be kept to a minimum," according to MSgt. Thomas Lanese, 65 CES mechanical superintendent. Instead, building numbers/letters will be painted on the exterior of the facility.

Building numbers and letters are essential for emergency response vehicles (fire, medical and police) to identify facilities. All name signs in Lower "T" and Beira Mar housing are also being removed. This will occur as scheduling and material permits.

Part of the Lower "T" and Beira Mar housing areas will have durable signs posted within existing frames showing the unit's identification letter only. This policy is not intended to prohibit residents from displaying their own family signs if they desire - as long as they are in good taste and don't damage their quarters. For more information, call Ext. 23335.

Self exams provide early detection of breast cancer

1st Lt. Kimberly A. Woolley
Staff nurse, 65th Medical Group

Every year women discover breast cancer in an early, highly treatable stage. Fortunately, due to mammography and more stringent guidelines for breast cancer prevention, the survival rate for breast cancer is now greater than it ever has been.

The most important thing you can do to protect yourself from breast cancer is to know the recommended guidelines. The number of breast cancer cases in the U.S. continues to rise; however, you can reduce your risk by following these guidelines:

- Monthly self breast exams by age 30
  - Physician breast exam every one to three years
  - Baseline mammography by age 40
  - Mammogram every one to two years from ages 40 to 50;
  - Mammogram every year for ages 50-65;
  - Mammogram every 2-3 years after age 65
- It is suggested that women at high risk for developing breast cancer have their first mammogram earlier in life and then every year after that. Women who are most at risk are those with a personal or family history of breast cancer. Obesity, age over 50, and late childbirth also increase a woman's risk of breast cancer.

Women who have large breasts or fibrocystic changes may put themselves at risk because they are hesitant to do monthly self breast exams. There should be no reason to hesitate to perform a breast self-exam. Breast models with both normal and abnormal lumps are available in the family practice clinic, Health Hut, and family advocacy on which to practice self breast examination.

To find out about personal risks for developing breast cancer, attend one of the Health Huts many health fairs or call Ext. 23261 to schedule an appointment with your doctor.

If you are due for a mammogram, your physician can set up an appointment for you. One-on-one education sessions with a registered nurse can also be scheduled through physician referral or by calling Ext. 23239.

Air Force Worldview

EFMP does't prevent deployments

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFPC) — From April 1, 1996 through March 31, nearly 174,000 Air Force members went on temporary duty - more than 40 percent away from their workplace for more than 30 days.

Among those serving away from home were individuals on assignment under the Exceptional Family Member Program. There are about 1,600 members whose assignments are currently provided under the EFMP.

Some in the EFMP, while fulfilling their deployment and TDY requirements, are surprised they are obligated to be away from family, confusing their assignment availability with those who are on humanitarian assignments - who are deferred from deployments and extended TDYs for up to 12 months.

People with EFMP assignments have a limitation code "Q" to identify there are special circumstances to be considered when up for reassignment, say officials with the Air Force Personnel Center here.

"The 'Q' code only serves to notify appropriate officials when you are selected for reassignment so proper measures can be taken to ensure family members' needs can be taken care of at the gaining location," explains Brenda Thompson, chief of the humanitarian and EFMP assignment programs. "Reassignments granted under the guidelines of the program only provide a location where services are available. It doesn't make provisions for people from fulfilling military obligations."

It's a common misperception, Thompson says, adding that if the member's presence has been medically documented, there are provisions for keeping the member at the assigned location for a specific period.

"The AFI (36-2110, Attachment 7, paragraph A7.3) states you may request deferment from going TDY during the initial assignment deferment period if you must be present and you are subject to extended TDY," Thompson says.

For more information about the EFMP or humanitarian assignment program, check out the entire AFI on the web at the Air Force's publications site.

Community kudos

Last month my family had a fire in our home. We would like to take this chance to thank the entire Lajes community for all the help and donations. We thank the good Lord that nobody was hurt and that we are a member of such a caring community. A special thanks to Father (Capt. Thomas) Doyle who spent a great deal of time helping us - Lajes will miss you. Out of five assignments, and after seeing people in situations like ours, I can honestly say the outreach of this community goes beyond words. Once again, from the bottom of our hearts, thank you and God Bless.

I know after your ordeal you have many things to do but let me say thank you for taking the time to recognize what a great group of people make up Team Lajes.

Uniforms off base

My understanding for wearing uniforms off base, even for short visits for IMPAC card purchases or to visit GEICO is that we cannot do so because it is considered a show of force. What is the policy on this and if it is as I understand it, what are the chances of having it changed for our benefit?

In accordance with the Technical Agreement between the United States and Portugal, Annex H, article VI, titled Wearing of Uniforms, it states that members of the force may only wear their uniforms outside Air Base No. 4 when on duty. I see purchasing a commodity with an IMPAC card as acting on duty, so you can wear your uniform to do so. Additionally, wearing your uniform while traveling between your residence and place of work is authorized. The bottom line is everyone must use good judgment so as not to offend our Portuguese hosts.

101 Critical Days

Leave fireworks to pros

SSgt. Leonard Turner
NCOIC of safety

If you think fireworks are harmless fun, keep this in mind: All fireworks, not just illegal devices in the hands of the unlicensed amateur, can be extremely dangerous.

In the hands of amateurs, fireworks are a serious fire and burn hazard that can cause injuries to the handlers. Injuries come from the intense heat of fireworks and typically harm the eyes and head; can cause blindness; lacerations; amputations; and burns that leave lifetime disfiguring scars.

Watching fireworks at a public professional display can be truly spectacular and without question, it's the safer way to enjoy the 4th of July holiday.

So, leave the fireworks to the professionals. And, remember if you find any unexploded fireworks, do not pick them up, but rather call 911 for assistance.

Happy 4th of July.

What is the status of the seismic activity that recently affected Terceira and São Miguel?

According to the Chief of the Seismology Department of the Institute of Meteorology in Ponta Delgada, Dr. Luisa Senos, the seismic activity on the islands of Terceira and São Miguel has been gradually decreasing since an initial earthquake, which measured 4.9 in the Richter scale, was felt on June 27 at 4:40 a.m.

As of 4 p.m., Tuesday, a total of 1,070 after-shock tremors had been registered by the seismologic stations, of which approximately 31 were felt by the population.

These earthquakes' epicenters were located in the fishing bank of Dom João de Castro, a shallow area located between the islands of Terceira and São Miguel, approximately 77 kilometers from Lajes Field.

Still, according to the Institute's researchers, the tremors were caused by a movement of tectonic plates in the epicenter's area.

The Bank of Dom João de Castro is one of the places in the Azores where the seismic activity is more frequent. It has also been pointed out as a place where in a far future, a possible tenth island of the Azores may emerge since the floor of the ocean has been gradually approaching the ocean's surface, currently being only 56 feet deep. The last volcanic eruption in this ocean area took place in 1720.

The Regional Service for Civil Protection has asked everyone to remain calm and not pay attention to circulating rumors that a bigger earthquake is imminent. These are just rumors and have no basis.

The Civil Protection Service has no reports of injuries or damages that may have been caused by the earthquake or subsequent after-shocks.
